Pennsylvania Privateers In The American Revolution

Being a Brief and Incomplete Sketch. By Lieutenant (Jr. G.) Louis E. Fagan, Jr., Naval Force, Penna.

The history of the United States Navy is so intimately connected with that of our privateers that the story of one would be incomplete without a full record of the other. In our wars with Great Britain, in 1776 and 1812, many of the captains of the navy assumed command of privateers, in which they frequently rendered services of tremendous importance, while the privateersmen furnished the navy with a large number of officers, many of whom are figures of national fame. Truxton, Porter, Biddle, Decatur, Barney, Talbot, Barry, Perry, Murray, Rodgers, Cassin, Little, Robinson Smith and Hopkins—all officers of the navy—were privateersmen as well.

In our struggle for freedom from the yoke of Great Britain the government war vessels—built, purchased or hired—numbered forty-seven, or, including the flotilla on Lake Champlain, sixty-four vessels of all descriptions, carrying a total of one thousand two hundred and forty-two guns and swivels. This force captured one hundred and ninety-six vessels. Of the privateers there were seven hundred and ninety-two, carrying more than thirteen thousand guns and swivels. These vessels captured or destroyed about six hundred British vessels. We thus see that our privateers were a most important if not predominating feature of our earliest sea power. The same is true in the case of the War of 1812, as proven by official statistics.

The entire naval forces of the United States—both navy and privateers—captured about eight hundred vessels from Great Britain in our first war, valued at twenty-three million eight hundred and eighty thousand dollars, while the prisoners could not have been less than sixteen thousand. Against these figures we have some twenty-two thousand prisoners taken by our land forces during this same period. To the reader who may have been taught that our independence was achieved almost entirely by the efforts of our land forces, these statements of the comparative values and amount of work done on sea and on land will doubtless prove a matter of surprise. Facts are facts, however, and these are authentic.

Pennsylvania, whose sons contributed so largely to our success on land, was most instrumental in establishing a profound respect for the American flag on the high seas. Her privateersmen were famous for their brave deeds of the privateers that put to sea early in the War of the Revolution, those of our own State seem to have met with the greatest success. The Chance took a very valuable ship, the Lady Jane, which was laden with valuable merchandise, and she was but a sloop of four guns, commanded by Captain T. Adams. This was in May, 1776. About the same time the 24-gun Cornet, while near St. Kitts, engaged for three hours a heavily armed British merchantman, but the latter managed to escape, with the loss of her mizzenmast.

In the same year, 1776, Captain T. Hamilton, with the 12-gun

brig General Mifflin, sailed for English waters, and made several important captures, one of them being a ship with a cargo of wine. Returning to the west, the General Mifflin raised a British privateer carrying eighteen guns and eighty men, and engaged with it. After losing twenty-two men killed or wounded, including their commander, the British vessel surrendered. The Americans casualties were thirteen.

Another vessel, the General Montgomery, a brig of twelve guns and one hundred men, under Captain Montgomery, raised a fleet of one hundred merchantmen, in October, 1776. These ships were convoyed by several British warships. By adroit maneuvering the privateer succeeded in cutting oue one of the merchantmen, the ship Thetis, laden with rum and sugar.

Philadelphia sent many privateers out from port in the early stage of the Revolution, a full recountal of whose exploits would be a long tale. Among them were the Nancy, the Ranger and the Sturdy Beggar. The Nancy, a 6-gun brig, was chased ashore near Cape Henry by a British cruiser, June 29, 1776. After getting a portion of their cargo and powder on land the Americans blew up the Nancy, lest it might become a British prize. The Ranger, Captain Hudson, captured two store ships laden with military supplies. The Sturdy Beggar in May, 1778, was captured, with eight other American vessels, in Croswell Creek, by an English force consisting of two schooners, four gunboats, four galleys, and about twenty flatboats, under the command of Captain Henry, of the Royal Navy, and Major Maitland, possibly an officer of the Royal Marines (?).

Stephen Decatur was a well known privateer from Pennsylvania, sailing from his home port, Philadelphia, on many successful cruises. Among his commands were the 10-gun sloop Comet, the 16-gun brig Fair America, the 6-gun galley Retaliation, the 13-gun ship Rising Sun, and the 22-gun ship Royal Louis, which displaced 100 tons and carried a crew of 200 men. This was one of the largest ships engaged in privateering during that war, and captured, among other prizes, the British sloop of war Active, after a sharp engagement attended by a great loss of life on both sides. Stephen Decatur was a resident of Philadelphia, and the son of Etienne Decatur, a French aristocrat who sailed from France to Amecria and made Newport, R. I., his home. This Stephen was the father of John, James and Stephen Decatur, the last named son being in after years the celebrated hero of Tripoli, Commodore Stephen Decatur, who, as a Navy Commissioner, died in a duel fought with ex-Commodore Barron. Stephen 2d accompanied his father on some of his cruises as a young officer and received that training which in later years did so much to make our naval officers respected and feared the world over. James Decatur was treacherously slain in the Tripolitan war, for which his brother Stephen sought revenge by killing his slayer on the same day. Stephen 2d is buried at the old St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Philadelphia. The third son, John, served as an army officer in the War of 1812. His son, Stephen 3d, rose to the rank of Commodore in the United States Navy, experiencing the War of the Rebellion; and his son, Stephen 4th, served as navigator of the U. S. S. Caesar in the Spanish-American War, and his son, Stephen 5th, followed his father's footsteps and entered the Naval Academy. He is now a Lieutenant in the Massachusetts Naval Militia, where he is upholding the traditions of his family for love of, and faithfulness to, the service of his country. A member of this illustrious branch of the Decatur family will soon become identified with Philadelphia, for one of the daughters of Stephen 4th has recently engaged herself to Mr. Fisher Wright, of this city, a cousin of Commander Robert K. Wright, N. F. P., who organized the Naval Force of this State January 6, 1893, thus reviving the old navy of Pennsylvania that rendered such efficient services during the Revolution.

Another famous privateersman whose adventures were most thrilling was Captain John Walsh, a descendant of the ancient Kings of Ireland, who came to Philadelphia in 1765, entering the firm of his cousin, Thomas Fitz Simons, the well-known patriot, who served in the Continental Congress. At the outbreak of the War of the Revolution, Walsh enthusiastically embraced the patriot cause, for although he had been born in Great Britain, it must be remembered that the English had for centuries oppressed the Irish nation, and particularly the Irish who adhered to the Holy Catholic Church, of which Walsh was a devout member. In fact, one fourth of those engaged in defending the patriot cause on land and sea were Irish by birth or extraction. The firm of which Walsh was a member gave $25,000 at the outset to aid the cause. Captain Walsh, whose nautical training was extensive, assumed general command over all the armed ships of his firm, and on many occasions commanded single vessels, some of the largest afloat at the time. His captures were of great importance—on several occasions being troop-ships and transports laden with arms, clothing and provisions for the British, which Walsh sent to General Washington's starving troops.

In an engagement, July 7, 1778, off Sandy Hook, N. Y. harbor, Captain Walsh had his breast torn open by the explosion of a hand grenade, and nearly died of his injuries.

Captain Walsh was twice captured by the British, in each case after having been severely wounded. He was confined in the prison ships at New York, enduring all the great privations and sufferings that befell the unfortunate Americans who were confined there. In his last captivity, he was lying chained to the deck in irons, when a British naval officer of noble birth, passing by, recognized the emaciated features of Walsh as those of his former captor, who had treated him with great courtesy aboard his vessel while the Englishman had been a prisoner of war. This officer was unceasing in his efforts to affect the release of his benefactor, and through his influence Captain Walsh was exchanged, and at a most opportune time, for he often remarked that his death would have been a matter of but a short while, amid the terrible conditions that then prevailed in the prison ships, where men were crowded in ill-ventilated and dark holds and fed on such food that they soon died of starvation or fever.

Many of Captain Walsh's descendants have been officers in the service, and one is at present an officer in the Naval Force of Pennsylvania.

NAVAL FORCE, PENNA., ON FOREIGN CRUISE.

Persuant to the receipt of a letter from the Secretary of the Navy, Commander Joseph M. Mitcheson, commanding First Battalion, N. F. P., has notified the officers of his command that all who care to do so may take the foreign cruise planned for the coming winter. Fifteen enlisted men, mostly petty officers, will also be permitted to enjoy this privilege. The militiamen will be assigned to ships of the Atlantic fleet, which will sail for European ports at assigned dates, and will rendezvous in the Mediterranean Sea, where they will hibernate, visiting ports of interest. Shore liberty will be granted whenever practicable, and it is expected that a great deal of entertaining for both officers and men will be done in honor of the American visitors.

The naval militiamen will lose their identity entirely, and will become an integral part of the fleet, performing their respective duties as though they were in the regular service. This is the recognized method of treating them, and has been pursued for a number of years. By this means the naval militias of the several States have been trained to a high degree of proficiency. Apropos of this, it might be remarked that California now holds the world's record for 3-inch and 6-pounder rapid fire gun target practice, made in 19912 on the U. S. S. Marblehead at Magdalena Bay. The Naval Force of this State is rated third in standing for great guns among the naval militias of the United States. The coming cruise is eagerly anticipated, and quite a number have signified their intention of making it.

GENERAL DRAIN'S VIEWS.

Through the special courtesy of General James A. Drain, the Journal is presenting an editorial of unusual merit from Arms and The Man, which in reviewing the relations between the Organized Militia and the regular establishment, points out the need for a calm, dispassionate consideration of pay-for-drill-attendance bill. The Journal is an ardent advocate of the measure and is particularly devoted to the cause of the National Guard. The views of General Drain should be read with particular interest by all friends of the Organized Militia. The editorial was inspired by the recent well-known discussion at the convention of the National Guard Association of the United States at Chicago, when the future relations between the two great elements of the national defense caused several divergent expressions of opinion.

The editorial stated in part:

"There was apparent in the convention during the heat of discussion a sharp and distinct line of cleavage between two schools of thought. On the one hand, the War Department and the Militia Division; on the other a considerable portion of the National Guard.

"Now it is plain to any honest man who knows the sentiments of the two wings of this argumentative army, that there are no real differences between them. The avowed, the actual purpose of each in all questions affecting the National Guard is to make that organization as efficient as it can be made. But there are differences of opinion concerning what measures will best produce the desired results. This is natural. Nothing else could be expected, because the questions involved are not only large but in many aspects they are new.

"They are new because the requirements of the situation are novel, and because never in the history of the United States or any other country has a court passed upon the constitutional questions involved. Any attempts of those who would pronounce the existing militia law unconstitutional on a basis of previous decisions, or who undertake to say that a proposed law would be unconstitutional for similar causes, must fall flat in consequence. So far as the legal aspect of the situation is concerned we are carving out a new way, and that must be realized from the beginning or the limitations and the impediments imposed by the doctrines of stare decisis will prevent a comprehension of the true form of the case.

"Let the legal aspect of it go. We can deal with it later, and besides it would take more space than the whole of this issue of Arms and The Man to discuss it.

"We think it must be agreed to by those who know, and who are not more or less blinded by prejudice, that the object to be gained, as it is understood by the War Department and officers of the army, and by the Organized Militia, is the same object: Namely, the highest practicable efficiency of the Organized Militia, so that it may be as nearly fit as is humanly possible to bear the burdens which would be imposed upon it by war; and the assurance, positive and absolute, that the Organized Militia shall be available in case of need to serve wherever the President of the United States may require it for as long as he shall need it, in or out of the country.

"Here, then, we have what each and all and everyone whose opinion is worthy of consideration, does desire. The only question is, how to accomplish it. A small school of military enthusiasts about equally composed of officers of the Army and National Guard have often considered the practicability of creating a volunteer army in time of peace, one which should be out of the control of the States and at the disposition of the Federal Government. But while such a force would, from the purely military standpoint, seem for many reasons to be a desirable one, yet there are considerations involved which make the establishment and maintenance of it an absolute impossibility.

"We say this in the most positive way, because a long-continued study of the subject of national defence, with all that such study implies, has demonstrated to us beyond the possibility of a doubt that the militia mentioned in the constitution, shaped as it will have to be shaped, controlled as it will have to be controlled, supported as it will have to be supported, commanded as it will have to be commanded, by the joint efforts of the Federal Government and the several States, is as much a part of our nation as its name or its flag.

"You cannot change that fact. You might as well admit the militia to be, with all its faults, in one form or another, an inseparable part of our national life.

"Then accepting it so, guided by the best intelligence that you can exercise, and the high desire of helping your country, you must assist to make it by every stretch and strain and broadening of national and State tolerance, by the catholic comprehension of the vital importance of the fundamental principles involved, what it ought, should and can be made, a practicable part of the first line with the regular army for war.

"How trivial, how pitifully small and mean appear obstructive arguments upon the details of such a proposition when we consider that not only the health and welfare of the nation are involved, but the very life of it.

"Let the National Government once thoroughly antagonize the Organized Militia; let there be a break of the friendly, yes, brotherly relations which have grown up between the Army and the National Guard in the last ten years, and you will not only have a National Guard which shall have reverted to its former condition of practical national useless as a series of State armies, but you will have no Army of the United States.

"It is as true as the truest thing that man may think and say that the officers and men of the National Guard can do more and actually are doing more to create a popular conception of the necessity for military preparation than all other agencies which can be set to work.

"Make your National Guardsman think rightly on military propositions, and he will see to it that the people—and more important still, the Congress—think rightly. We need go no further back in history than to the time when the Army bill to increase the pay of officers and men, and that other one to add to the number of officers of the Army, were before Congress to observe that concerted action on the part of the Organized Militia of the United States was the determining factor in deciding whether these propositions, so necessary for the welfare of our regular establishment, should be placed upon the Statute books.

"The questions relating to the usefulness of the Organized Militia and how to make it more useful are not small ones. They have no local significance. They are without value when considered from any other standpoint than that of the greatest national good.

"It is a law of life that when men cease to think of themselves and consider only the greatest good, they are given almost prophetic vision, and an intelligence far beyond that of ordinary times.

"It was so the fathers of our country saw, and they were not unwise when they parceled out between the United States and the several States the powers inherent in government. It is so men should think now.

"That there should be a Federal sovereignty and as many State sovereignties as there are States, seems to the man who wishes to take short cuts and centralize government—and especially to the one who considers questions of military expediency alone—an incumbrance; an unfortunate state of affairs, but he is wrong. The spirit of give and take; the employment of the principles of comity; the joining up in a feeling of full partnership recommends the system to the favorable consideration of sound political economists. It is not perfect, no man-made system can be, but it is ours and must be made to serve.

"Whole-hearted co-operation between the Army and the Organized Militia; a due respect of each for the opinions of the other; a proper allowance for unavoidable differences in point of view, begot of dissimilar environment, will provide common ground upon which both may stand for the common good.

"The concrete questions at stake, and at present under discussion, and upon which opinions differ, are whether the efficiency of the Organized Militia can be increased by making an allowance to it by the Federal Government. And, to what extent the power of the United States, through ability to control appropriations, shall be exercised upon the States to make them conform in the organization of their units and the distribution of arms of the service to correspond with the ideas of the War Department.

"Upon the first question, that of allowances to the Organized Militia, we apprehend that as the purpose is to increase the efficiency of the Organized Militia, and as the best judges of what would increase the efficiency of the Organized Militia are the militiamen themselves, that the War Department would do well to give great weight to the opinions of the men of the National Guard.

"Habitually we believe the best National Guardsman would first approach the question of allowances, or better say 'pay,' for the National Guard for its drill service, with repugnance. He would not look with favor upon receiving pay for services which he is rendering from the highest patriotic motives.

"For, mark you explicitly, the National Guardsman who stays in the service and continues to do his work as the requirements of the present situation compel, has a definite conception of his patriotic duties or he would not be in the service. Very likely he joined without such a serious purpose, but he does not remain and continue to do his work unless he has realized the national side of his service. He is serving in peace that he may be better fitted to serve in war.

"But while the great majority of National Guard officers and men would approach the idea of pay for the Organized Militia with a feeling of doubt as to its expediency or propriety, a further consideration of all the elements involved might well convince them that such allowances as have been heretofore urged by the Organized Militia could be reasonably expected to increase efficiency of the whole force, and without doubt if they would increase efficiency they should be given.

"The question of whether the efficiency gained would be equal in value to the cost is one which the War Department should well consider. But upon that question again the opinions of the National Guardsmen should be accepted as the opinions of experts.

"There is another side to the question of pay for the Organized Militia which should be considered. In the United States to-day, out of 16,000,000 men subject to military duty, and all constituting the militia, a little handful of 120,000 are in the Organized Militia. These men are bearing upon their shoulders the burdens which should be distributed among 16,000,000 of their fellows.

"Is it right; is it fair; is it just; is it honorable that the impositions of the service required of them, which reduces their earning power in their civil employments—because they must all make a living—should be allowed to bear them down, while those others who see not their duty, or seeing it, ignore their obligations, pass on to outdistance the busy National Guardsmen in the fierce competition of this ultra-commercial age?

"You do not have to pay the National Guard to make it do its work. But you ought to be willing to provide some allowances to the National Guard to assist in compensating it for the service it renders, and thus make it practicable for good men to perform this important public duty without undue personal sacrifice.

"Look back to the time when the Militia Bills of 1903 and 1908 were passed. Remember that they were the children of the brains of the National Guardsmen. The bills were not proposals of the War Department, although they were concurred in by the War Department. See what they mean. These laws provided for all the impositions of service and conformation and training and hard work and foreign service, without limit, and the National Guardsmen made these proposals and provisions and secured the enactment of these laws without promise or thought of pay, that they might take the place they thought they should take in the first line with the Regular Army for war.

"As they went a little along the way of their newer and heavier duties they sought constantly for ways to increase their efficiency; for means by which they could insure to the Federal Government that the force of which they were a part should not be a broken reed when the nation called for its efforts, but that it should be a strong pillar of defense.

"And in casting about for ways to increase efficiency much of the best intelligence of the organization decided that Federal allowances to the men for home or drill duty would be of great assistance. They asked for it; they secured in the beginning the approval of the War Department for the principle, but through differences of opinion upon details up to this moment the Congress has not—with the united support, unqualified and enthusiastic, of the War Department, the Army and the National Guard—been called upon to make a law for the purpose.

"It is manifest upon the face of it that any effort on the part of the National Guard to get legislation which does not meet with the approval of the War Department may well be expected to result in failure. It is further evident that any legislation for the Army should the National Guard oppose it will be likely to fail. There is little enough healthy sentiment in this country for the proper development of our military resources. That we all know. Such educated sentiment as there is should thresh out every one of its differences of opinion, agreeing to compromise upon every other than vital questions, decide upon what is right and then go forward with an united front to carry it to a successful consummation.

"The War Department and the National Guard behind the pay bill will pass it; the National Guard alone would lose it; the War Department alone could not accomplish it.

"Together—and especially with the support of Secretary of War Garrison, who stands so close to Mr. Wilson—with President Wilson's assistance, the Congress which has shown its deep deference to his opinions, may be expected to make the pay bill Federal law before another year has rolled around.

"Upon the question of conformation we apprehend that there has been an undue amount of anxiety. It does not seem probable to us that the War Department would insist upon conformation where that condition was physically impossible. On the other hand, it is the manifest duty of the War Department to urge by every possible means as close an approach to conformation as the circumstances in the different States will permit. What organization will be best suited to war requirements is a question for the general staff of the Army. Officers of the Army are the experts whose opinions ought to govern here.

"It is not possible to change the State organizations in a minute or in a month or in a year. Ten years have gone by since the conformation law was first written, and in some of the States practically nothing has been done to conform. Each individual State in this respect constitutes a separate, distinct and individual problem. Representations should be made by the Adjutant General to the War Department of the exact condition of affairs within his jurisdiction, and it is not to be expected upon any reasonable ground that the War Department will insist upon strict conformation under a penalty of withdrawal of funds, when it has been proven an impossibility to make the changes in organization required.

"And, finally, in dealing with these tremendously important questions of such vital consequence to the United States, let us approach the consideration of every phase of the subject clothed in the garment of unselfishness and broad understanding. There is scarcely any question, in fact there is no question, with which the War Department has to deal to-day, which is of more importance than the determination of what it will do to help to increase the efficiency of the Organized Militia. Not only on account of the direct value of this force, in time of war, if properly trained, but also because the men of the National Guard are the real military missionaries of the land. The Panama Canal, the Philippines, the Army, sink into insignificance beside this question.

"We shall expect Mr. Garrison, who announces in his letter an open mind upon the subject and a great interest in the Organized Militia, to decide the issues involved strictly on their merits, upon a broad, comprehensive view of the whole situation. In the end, we believe that he will come to see that on questions affecting the efficiency of the National Guard, the National Guardsmen's testimony can be considered that of an expert. It is manifest that the existing law with relation to the extra-territorial service of the Organized Militia having been called into doubt by an opinion of an attorney-general, that an amendment of it should be written—so long as you propose to make any changes in the law, it might as well be done—which will put that question beyond a doubt.

"For ourselves, considering that the Congress is the sole war-making power of our nation, and that its power in this respect is plenary, and that a law of the Union, especially in times of war, runs as between sovereign and subject wherever that subject may be as a part of the military establishment of the nation, we believe the present law to be constitutional.

"But that is by the question. If anybody doubts it let the law be so reinforced that no one, be he narrow or be he broad, be he wise or be he foolish, can call its validity into question.

"It is time for calm, and careful, and dispassionate and earnest and patriotic consideration of these great national questions. We shall need to be very sure we are right before we go ahead in any direction, but we can positively do great good for the country if we only talk and think and walk where and how we should."

CONVENTION UNITED SPANISH WAR VETERANS.

The recent convention of the United Spanish War Veterans at Buffalo was of unusual interest and much important legislation was enacted. The association is now riding on a wave of tremendous popularity and its annual proceedings are of unusual moment.

The story of the convention, told day by day, follows:

First Day.—The convention was called to order by Commander-in-Chief Taylor at 9 A. M. The Credentials Committee reported that Lawton Camp, No. 19, of Wilkes-Barre, had not paid its per capita tax within the prescribed thirty days of the convention and the Commander-in-Chief ruled that the camp would not be entitled to a voice in the proceedings. The commander of Lawton Camp, arising, announced that he had information that Hunt Camp, No. 1, of Pittsburgh, had not paid its tax and declared that if his delegates were not allowed a voice that the Commander-in-Chief was also not entitled to participate, as he was a member of Hunt Camp. The Commander-in-Chief then made a ruling that any camp could pay its taxes at any time during the convention and the delegates be seated. Reports of officers were then read until adjournment at 1 o'clock.

At the afternoon session, the reading of reports of officers was concluded and committees on grievance, rules and regulations, and greetings and resolutions were then appointed. Delegates from New York declared that as the Commander-in-Chief was vitally interested in several matters to be considered by the Grievance Committee, that body should be named by the Senior Vice-Commander-in-Chief. The Commander-in-Chief in reply stated that he was not interested in anything before the committee, and after considerable warm debate his appointments were sustained. The Greetings Committee was then instructed to send greetings to the President of the United States, Commander of the G. A. R., Commander of the G. A. of the Confederacy, Foreign Camps, absent officers of the U. S. W. V., and others. Telegrams and communications were then read, after which the convention adjourned at 6.30 o'clock.

Second Day.—The parade was held in the morning. The camps assembled at 10 o'clock and the line moved about 10.30 and finished at 1.45, marching about thirteen miles and but a solitary halt of about fifteen minutes.

The afternoon session was called to order at 3 o'clock. The Credential Committee reported that 141 names had been added to the list of delegates, making the list to date 410, and more to come. More telegrams of greetings were then read. A communication from Kendall Camp, No. 1, of Maine, told of presentation to National Headquarters of a gavel made from wood taken from the Maine, highly polished, and having a silver plate on each side bearing the donor's name. Resolutions of thanks were adopted. A committee, consisting of Past Commanders-in-Chief Ward and Simmons, of New York, was appointed to escort guests to the platform, among those thus honored being two comrades who had served forty-three years, one in the Army and the other in the Navy. The Rules and Regulations Committee then made its report, which included the following new provisions:

Any uniform can be worn that was worn in the Army, Navy or Marine service, between April 27, 1898, and July 4, 1902, provided that it is adopted by the camp as a whole.

Cap device is changed to a Spread Eagle, with the number of the camp between the wings.

Camp commanders are members of the Department Council of Administration.

Camp surgeons will make yearly reports, and in their absence the Adjutant will make the reports.

No one can be a member of two camps at the same time.

The per capita tax will be 45 cents per year and the Spanish War Review will be issued free.

Returns of all referendum votes must be made within sixty days.

Any man who served in any American war and received an honorable discharge can be made an honorary member of any camp. This includes Confederate veterans.

Adjutant and Quartermaster shall be rated as captains and shall wear double bars on their badges, the same as the officer of the day.

Paymasters and clerks who have served in actual service are eligible as members.

In cases of delegates not attending national conventions the Camp or Department Commander may fill vacancies, either from or outside of the particular camp.

All amusements at future national conventions must be set aside until regular business is concluded.

Inspector General to be appointed instead of elected.

Patriotic Instructors to be appointed to National Headquarters, Department Headquarters, and to camps, one to each.

A member is delinquent when he owes three months' dues.

At the conclusion of the report, nominations for officers were made as follows:

Commander-in-Chief: John L. Smith, District of Columbia; William Bush, Michigan.

S. V. Commander-in-Chief: Edgar R. Barker, Rhode Island; John O'Donohue, Florida.

J. V. Commander-in-Chief: Benjamin F. Atkinson, Ohio; August B. Hartwig, Indiana.

Deputy Commanders-in-Chief, three to be elected: George A. Seydes, Honolulu; Charles O'Donnell and W. W. Dayton, Philippines.

Surgeon General: Herman Burgin, Pennsylvania; William E. Howard, Texas, and Frank W. Veninga, Mississippi.

Chaplain-in-Chief: William H. I. Reaney, New York; J. Madison Hare, New Jersey.

Historian: Edward H. White, Illinois, and William J. S. Dineen, New York.

Third Day.—Messrs. Bush, White and Hartwig withdrew as candidates and delegates proceeded to vote in morning. Balloting closed at 12.30 o'clock. Delegates visited Niagara Falls on special train in afternoon. Resumed work at night. Results of election announced: John L. Smith, Commander-in-Chief; E. R. Barker, S. V. Commander-in-Chief; B. F. Atkinson, J. V. Commander-in-Chief; G. A. Seydes, Charles O'Donnell and W. W. Dayton, Deputy Commanders-in-Chief; F. W. Veninga, Surgeon General; J. M. Hare, Chaplain-in-Chief, and William J. Dineen, Historian.

The report of the Committee on Constitution changing the name of the organization to the Legion of the Spanish War raised a storm of protest and no action was taken.

Fourth Day.—Changes in rules and regulations outlined above adopted. By a vote of 177 it was decided to continue the Review. Convention agreed to have copies of proposed constitution sent to the different camps for referendum vote. Ballot for next year's convention, concluding proceedings, was: Louisville, 96; Scranton, 90, and Havana, 1.

BULLETIN OF MILITIA NOTES.

The following information is gleaned from the latest bulletin of the Division of Militia Affairs, War Department:

The question has been asked as to whether it is proper for an Inspector-Instructor on duty with the Organized Militia of a State to furnish a report as to the efficiency of an officer or organization of the Organized Militia, upon the written request of the Adjutant General. The Inspector-Instructor is on duty in a State to assist and advise the military authorities in every way in his power with the idea of perfecting the organization and training of the Organized Militia. The efficiency of organizations and their training depends largely upon the individuals which compose them, and a knowledge of the military value of such individual is essential if the best results in command and instruction are to be obtained. It is, therefore, undoubtedly the duty of the Inspector-Instructor to report upon the same, bearing in mind that the report must be based upon the facts which are known personally to him; that the "efficiency" must be considered from a purely military point of view and without reference to the private character of the individual; and finally that no comparison should be made with any other organization, officer, or soldier, the report dealing only with the one concerned.

For several years past Congress has made appropriations with the view to enabling officers of the Organized Militia to attend the course of instruction prescribed for the several service schools; but the records of the War Department do not indicate that such officers have availed themselves of the opportunities afforded of taking the course in the Schools for Bakers and Cooks.

If officers of the Organized Militia would avail themselves of the opportunity of perfecting themselves in the up-to-date methods in baking and cooking as taught in these schools, it would be readily seen that this instruction would be far-reaching in its effects and would naturally aid regimental and company commanders in establishing efficient messing arrangements should their organizations be called into active service in the field. Even one well instructed officer from each militia regiment would be of incalculable value in instructing the cooks of the various companies.

There are now three of these schools, one each in the Eastern, Central, and Western Departments, and it is hoped shortly to establish one in the Southern Department.

In order to be eligible to attend these schools, officers of the Organized Militia must be recommended to the Secretary of War by the Governors of their respective States or Territories, or by the Commanding General of the District of Columbia Militia; must be citizens of the United States, not less than 21 nor more than 35 years of age, and not above the grade of Colonel. They must be members of the Organized Militia at least one year prior to making application; must be of sound health and of good moral character, and must have such educational qualifications as will enable them to participate profitably in the course of instruction.

The application in each case must be accompanied by the following papers:

(a) An affidavit of the applicant stating his age, citizenship, and length of service in the Organized Militia.

(b) An agreement signed by the applicant that in the event of his being authorized to attend and pursue the regular course of study at these schools he will be bound by and conform to the rules and regulations governing the schools.

(c) A certificate of a medical officer of the Organized Militia, or of any physician of good standing, showing the physical condition of the applicant.

(d) A certificate of an officer of the Organized Militia above the grade of captain as to the moral character and educational qualifications of the applicant.

The course of instruction is for six months.

In view of the fact that there seems to be considerable misunderstanding about the proper way to handle funds deposited to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, on account of refundments of overpayments or disallowances in disbursing accounts, attention is invited to the following:

Deposits to the official credit of the Treasurer of the United States on account of refundment of overpayments, or of disallowances made in the accounts of a disbursing officer should be recorded on both the debtor and the credit sides of the account current. On the credit side the amount should be charged as a refundment of overpayment or a disallowance as the case may be. On the debtor side credit should be claimed for the deposit of this amount to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States.

Upon the receipt in the Division of Militia Affairs of the certificate of deposit, the amount is covered back into the appropriation under Section 1661 of the Revised Statutes and credited to the allotment to the State.

It will thus be seen from the foregoing that money refunded on account of disallowances or overpayments, and deposited to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, is no longer included in the balance held by the disbursing officer, and a requisition of the Governor is necessary if it is desired that this amount shall again be placed to the official credit of a disbursing officer.

Organizations receiving Signal Corps radio pack sets should exercise the utmost care in unpacking them, making prompt report to the Chief, Division of Militia Affairs of any defects noted.

(a) All parts of the sets, except the spark gaps and receiving sets are in plain view and it can be readily noticed if they have been injured in any way.

(b) No repairs should be attempted involving the dis-assembling of any of the important parts such as the transformers, receiving sets, generator gearing, etc. This applies particularly to the spark gaps and the receiving sets. The spark gap used is of the quenched spark style, made up of a certain number of copper disks so fashioned that the center of the plate is the sparking surface. Each plate is separated from the others by a mica ring. To properly perform its function the space between the plates must be air-tight and the plates and mica rings in perfect alignment and the sparking surfaces free from any foreign matter. For these reasons this gap must never be dismounted except by an expert.

In regard to the receiving sets, any attempt to remove the hard rubber top would certainly disarrange the numerous connections inside, causing the short-circuiting of some of the connections and the disabling of the set.

The radio equipment should be kept under the personal control of the most expert electricians in the organization and these men only should be allowed to handle it.

In case the sets do not work properly or in case of injury to any of the parts, immediate report should be made to the Chief, Division of Militia Affairs.—(44506—D. M. A.)

WHY I AM A NATIONAL GUARDSMAN.

1. I believe in my country's need.
2. I need the physical training of military drill.
3. I want to know how to care for my body in camp and field.
4. I enjoy the rifle practice, and without any cost to me.
5. I would rather live in the open air, and so I go to camp.
6. The annual maneuvers are instructive, interesting—and inexpensive.
7. I have all the privileges of the armory—no dues.
8. I meet and associate with many able and intelligent men.
9. If there should be war I know the fundamentals and can shoot, and will know how to fight disease.
10. I most thoroughly believe that every able-bodied citizen should serve at least one enlistment as a citizen soldier.
11. With all these advantages I am away from home only one night each week.
12. If you are interested in the work, for yourself or your son, call personally at the local armory any evening.

A FEW DON'TS FOR TEAMSTERS.

Don't fail to water your animals before starting in the morning.

Don't fail to see that all your equipments are on the wagon.

Don't fail to look over your animals' feet for loose shoes.

Don't fail to report to your respective companies in time for loading.

Don't fail to report anything wrong about your wagon or mules.

Don't wait until you are ready to start before reporting sick mules, broken wagon, etc.

Don't think because you have unharnessed your mules that you are done.

Don't fail to inspect your wagon, mules and harness as soon as you arrive in camp.

Don't fail to clean your collars as soon as you can after unharnessing.

Don't water your mules if they are hot.

Don't rob other mules to feed yours.

Don't delegate your work to someone else.

Don't fail to be on hand at feeding time.

Don't leave the team without permission, except for meals.

Don't be late at your meals.

Don't think your wagon master is not as interested as you are in seeing that you get your allowance of forage.

Don't forget that he is responsible for both you and your animals.

And don't forget that you are under military discipline just as much as any soldier in the command.

And don't forget that "I forgot" doesn't go in business.

CAPTAIN CHARLES SPANGLER.

Captain Charles Spangler, who for many years was connected with the Fourth Infantry and was one of the best known Guardsmen of the State, has been brought out by his friends as a candidate for Councilman of Allentown, under the new commission form of government for that city. Captain Spangler was a Guardsman of exceptional merit, and, with his vast knowledge of men and things, should prove a municipal legislator of the highest rating. Captain Spangler is in every sense a self-made mad and is to-day one of the leading citizens of his home city. As a Guardsman, he was a splendid officer and devoted to the service. Since his retirement, he has never wavered in his interest in the militia and is one of the best friends of the service throughout the State. He was in active service with the Fourth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, during the Porto Rican campaign of the Spanish-American War, and his devotion to the welfare of the men of his company made him one of the most esteemed captains in the volunteer service. Captain Spangler is a prominent Mason, and is actively identified with other organizations. He is one of the leading business men of Lehigh county and conducts a large machine and foundry establishment. Captain Spangler employs many workmen, but his relations with those associated with him have always been of the pleasantest. He is a thorough workman himself, and is in complete sympathy with the cause of labor.

Captain Charles Spangler, who had an excellent record of service in the National Guard, is a native Pennsylvanian, having been born at Williamsburg, Blair county, on December 4, 1859.

He was the son of William and Susan (Heimbach) Spangler. His father was a skilled wheelwright, and later partner in the foundry and machine works, under the firm name of Barber & Co. His mother was the daughter of David Heimbach, well known as the operator of the first charcoal furnaces of Easton, Pennsylvania. The family removed to Allentown, Pa., when the subject of this sketch was less than a year old. Captain Spangler, as a boy, attended the public schools of Allentown.

After serving at the machinist trade, he established, in 1881, the machine and foundry business, which he is still actively pursuing, and which was conducted while he was away during the Spanish War.

Captain Spangler was at the head of Company D, Fourth Regiment, at the opening of the Spanish War in 1898. Practically his entire company enlisted for the conflict, and it was one of the first companies to be mustered in the U. S. service, on May 9, 1898. The company was at Chickamaugua, Georgia, for a time, and then entrained at Kossville for Newport News, to form part of the Porto Rican expedition aboard the City of Washington. It was the first company of the regiment to land at Arroyo, and with the First Battalion on the Cayey road on the morning of August 13, 1898, as support to a Missouri battery, and were ready for the command to begin hostilities when a messenger arrived announcing that a peace protocol had been signed suspending hostilities. The company remained in camp at Guayama with regular duties of outpost during the rest of the month, marching to Ponce on September 1, where it embarked on board the City of Chester, and sailed to New York. Returning home, a two months' furlough was granted and on November 16, 1898, was mustered out of the U. S. service. The company reorganizing as Company D, Fourth Regiment, Captain Spangler was again elected, and served until January 20, 1905, when he retired. During his service he participated in all active duties.

Captain Spangler is a charter member of George H. Schwartz Camp, No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans. He was elected Department Commander of United Spanish War Veterans of Pennsylvania, in 1904. The National Convention of this order at St. Louis, by resolution, ratified the choice.

FIRST LIEUTENANT WILLIAM BUTLER WINDLE,
Company I, Sixth Infantry.

NOTES.

It is reported that Colonel Frank G. Sweeney, Inspector General, will shortly retire from the service. In fact, it is stated that Colonel Sweeney some time ago requested to be relieved from active service, but was prevailed upon by Governor Tener to reconsider his plans for a time at least. Colonel Sweeney has long been identified with the National Guard and would be greatly missed.

Company D, First Infantry, which is considered to be one of the strongest and most efficient infantry units in Eastern Pennsylvania, is at present without Lieutenants. It is reported that further anxiety prevails as to the active continuance of Captain George van H. Potter, who, owing to impaired health may shortly retire. While there is some splendid material available for the commission officers, yet the retirement of Captain Potter would mean a distinct loss to the company and regiment. Captain Potter is regarded as one of the live wire company commanders and has been continually increasing the efficiency of his company.

The Philadelphia Battalion of the Sixth Infantry is now comfortably quartered at Forty-first and Mantua avenue, West Philadelphia, in the building which originally was built for the Keystone Battery A, but until recently was used as a garage. Major Tafel has succeeded in getting the business men's associations of West Philadelphia interested in National Guard work, and the officers are now hopeful of securing recruits through the influence of these organizations. Recently the battalion participated in a district carnival and received a great ovation along the line of march.

All officers having qualified for twenty or more consecutive years in rifle practice, including the season of 1913, will receive a distinctive gold decoration. Designs for this decoration are to be submitted to the Adjutant General's Department. It is said that this decoration may be suspended from the neck in a manner similar to that of the veteran marksmen medals issued by the State of New Jersey, which are thus classified: Fifteen years, bronze; twenty years, silver; twenty-five years, gold with a diamond centre.

Lieutenant Colonel Ezra H. Ripple, Jr., and Major R. J. Bourke, Thirteenth Infantry, are out of commission at the present time, but it is believed that both of these officers who have had a long and honorable connection with the service will be unanimously re-elected to their former positions.

The muster in of Company M, Fourth Infantry, at Bethlehem, on Monday evening, October 13, was attended with great success. Fifty young men enlisted and they were of a type that is bound to give the State a first-class infantry unit. Major Frank D. Beary, Deputy Adjutant General of the State, with the assistance of Capain Henry A. Reninger, Adjutant of the Fourth Infantry, attended to the official muster, and First Lieutenant and Assistant Surgeon Eugene H. Dickensheid looked after the physical examinations. Brigadier General James B. Coryell, commanding Fourth Brigade, and Colonel C. T. O'Neill, commanding Fourth Infantry and Senior Colonel of the State, supervised the general arrangement. These officers were unanimously elected: Captain, W. R. Coyle, (formerly United States Marine Corps); First Lieutenant, Franklin Cole; Second Lieutenant, H. W. Mack. After the election Captain Coyle with the approval of the regimental commander, announced the appointment of Private Harry P. Burd to First Sergeant. Among the many out-of-town officers present were Major P. E. Scheidy and Lieutenant T. C. Fegeley, who motored from Pine Grove, a distance of ninety miles. The visiting officers and friends were entertained at the Bethlehem Club after the formal exercises.

The dedication of the new State Armory for Company B, Sixteenth Infantry, located at Meadville, will take place on November 13, and will be a gala day for the northwestern section of the State Among the guests will be Governor Tener and his staff, Major General Charles Miller, Brigadier General Logan and staff, Colonels Coulter, Rickards, Bigger, McKee, Selden and Burns, and a host of well-known officers from all parts of the State. Major R. Bruce Gamble, Major E. Lowry Humes, and Captain Charles F. Clyde are making special preparations for a memorable occasion. A provisional battalion from the Sixteenth Infantry will parade and there will be a great reception and military ball in the evening.

Company I, Thirteenth Infantry, known through the Commonwealth as the Easton City Guard, will be transferred to the Fourth Infantry as Company L, thus giving Colonel O'Neill twelve companies. There is a strong probability of a machine gun company being organized in Northampton or Lehigh counties. This would be in accord with the new regulations practically giving each regiment of infantry thirteen units.

Companies K, C, A and I, of the Fourth Infantry, under command of Major Edward C. Shannon, paraded as the military escort at the Home Week celebration held at Columbia, on October 17. The troops made a splendid showing, each company parading its full strength. A troop of the Fifteenth United States Cavalry with their famous mounted band, and a battery of regular artillery, also paraded and made an excellent appearance.

SECOND LIEUTENANT JAMES PAUL MacELREE,
Company I, Sixth Infantry.

Friends of the pay-for-drill bill can aid the movement for a square deal for the militia by communicating with their Congressmen. The men at Washington hold the key to the situation. The question is one for them to meet. There can be no doubt of the unanimous support of the militia in favor of the bill. But the Guardsmen throughout the country can perform a patriotic service by posting the Congressmen in regard to the public sentiment. The Congressional Committee on Military Affairs consists of James Hay, Virginia, Chairman; S. Hubert Dent, Jr., Alabama; William J. Fields, Kentucky; Kenneth D. McKellar, Tennessee; William S. Howard, Georgia; Daniel J. Griffin, New York; Robert H. Gittins, New York; Warren Gard, Ohio; Frank T. O'Hair, Illinois; Frederick S. Deitrick, Massachusetts; Percy E. Quin, Mississippi; Daniel E. Garrett, Texas; Maurice Connolly, Iowa; William Gordon, Ohio; Julius Kahn, California; Daniel R. Anthony, Jr., Kansas; John C. McKenzie, Illinois; Frank L. Greene, Vermont; John M. Morin, Pennsylvania; Samuel B. Avis, West Virginia; Willis J. Hulings, Pennsylvania; James Wickersham, Alaska; Edward W. Carpenter, Clerk.

The Journal welcomes to the field of military journalism, The Password, the new official organ of Company B, of the Fourth Infantry. Under the Allentown date line, the fourth number of the lively publication has just made its appearance. It is replete in all that goes to make up a bright sheet, containing as it does interesting special articles, vigorous editorials, and up-to-the-minute notes. First Lieutenant Carroll H. Hudders is the efficient editor and manager. We predict a long and brilliant career for The Password.

NOTES

Major Henry Reed Hatfield, former Judge Advocate of the First Brigade and also a member of the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, will be the host of Major General John W. Schall and Brigadier General William G. Price, Jr., at "The Place," Eighteenth street and Hunting Park avenue, Philadelphia, on Saturday evening, October 25. Invitations to the affair, which is expected to be one of the most important social events of the year, have been extended to Brigadier General James B. Coryell, Colonel C. T. O'Neill, Colonel H. D. Turner, Colonel William F. Eidell, Colonel Caldwell K. Biddle, Colonel Thomas Biddle Ellis, General Schall's former staff and the present First Brigade staff, and other prominent officers of the Guard. Companies I, Third Infantry, and G., Second Infantry, and B. C. Tilghman Jr. Camp, No. 61, U. S. W. V., F., First Regiment, have been selected as units of the brigade to participate in the reception. Music will be furnished by the Third Infantry Band. Major Hatfield has long been highly esteemed for his efforts to promote the welfare of the Guard, and is again deserving of great praise for arranging for this testimonial to distinguished soldiers.

Along the line of Guard reorganization, the Thirteenth Infantry will shortly consist of only nine companies, and naturally this regiment is planning to secure three other units to complete its quota. Some time ago a report was current that the three Pittston companies of the Ninth might easily be transferred to Colonel Stillwell It is known, however, that such an arrangement would meet with decided opposition from Major General Dougherty and Colonel Reynolds. The Pittston companies have long been associated with the history of the Ninth Infantry and a transfer of this kind would be decidedly unpopular. Carbondale, Stroudsburg and Susquehanna, it is said, are ready to supply companies composed of young men who would be a credit to the Guard. It is said that General Clement regards with favor the muster in of a company at Carbondale. It is also reported that Colonel Charles C. Pratt, Aide-de-Camp on the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief and member of Congress, is interested in organizing an infantry company for Susquehanna county. Some years ago a company of the Thirteenth was located at Montrose, but subsequently was disbanded.

The National Guard Association of Pennsylvania is expected to hold its next annual convention in Philadelphia on December 12 and 13. During this period sub-conventions will be held at the several armories, to which the enlisted men will be invited. These sub-conventions will be devoted to special topics concerning engineers, artillery, cavalry, infantry and sanitation. It is also expected that an officer of the Regular Army will give an interesting picture exhibition of views taken in the recent war in the Balkan States. Much interest is being manifested in the coming convention, particularly along the line of pay-for-attendance-at-drill. The former method of local organizations, incurring the expenses of entertainment for the delegates, will be dispensed with this year and it is intended to give the delegates an opportunity of choosing their own manner of amusement after the executive sessions. There is, however, a prospect for a reception and ball, to which all officers of the Guard will be invited. General William G. Price, Jr., who has this matter in charge, has not as yet made any definite program.

The National Guardsmen will actively participate in the exercises to be held at the re-dedication of old Congress Hall, Philadelphia, on the afternoon of Saturday, October 25. In connection with the ceremonies, there is to be a big military and civic parade, of which Brigadier General Price will be the Grand Marshal. Brigadier General J. Lewis Good will command the First Brigade. The last time the brigade paraded in Philadelphia, the command appeared as a war strength regiment attired in field uniform. Upon this occasion the public will see the Guardsmen in their full dress United States Army uniforms. Detachments of marines and bluejackets from the Philadelphia Navy Yard and details, consisting of infantry and cavalry, from the regular establishment, will also take part. A pleasing feature of the parade will be the appearance of 1500 Boy Scouts. The historic First City Troop will as usual serve as escort to President Wilson. This famous organization has acted in this capacity to every President who has visited Philadelphia. The troop will appear in its historic uniform, which was adopted in 1774, two years before the Declaration of Independence, and has been changed only in trivial details since that time.

Colonel Benjamin Wolf will shortly entertain Governor John K. Tener, Adjutant General Thomas J. Stewart, the Departmental Chiefs with their deputies and the Aides-de-Camp on the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief in this city. The reception will probably take place at the St. James Hotel, Philadelphia.

A MILITIA COMPANY OF THE EARLY DAYS.
Company I, Sixth Infantry, Wayne Fencilbles, of West Chester, in full dress uniform.

The testimonial dinner tendered Captain H. P. Vercoe at Chester upon his retirement was a most successful affair. Among those in attendance were Colonel Frank G. Sweeney, Inspector General; Colonel T. Edward Clyde, Major Frank G. Perrin, and Major William S. Baird. Captain Vercoe's friends were pronounced in their expressions of esteem and regret was general over his retirement. Company C, which Captain Vercoe successfully commanded for nearly eight years, was present with a strength of sixty men. The company made a splendid appearance and was composed of a lot of clean-cut Americans.

Lieutenant Arthur C. Jenvey, a former officer of the Fourth Pennsylvania, is now a commissioned officer in the Fifth California. Lieutenant Jenvey transferred his business affairs several years ago from South Bethlehem to Los Angeles, California, and after a short residence there decided to enter the California National Guard. After a brief period in the ranks, he took an examination for Sergeant Major. After filling this office in a most creditable manner and having made such a favorable impression with Colonel Smith, the commander, he was requested to take an examination for a commission. He successfully passed with honor. It is said that the officers of this regiment are very much impressed with the expeditious manner in which Lieutenant Jenvey conducts military matters and that Lieutenant Jenvey modestly refers to the National Guard of Pennsylvania as being responsible for his martial training.
